The prices in this catalogue include delivery charges. Remittances should be sent with order from unknown customers, or satisfactory references.

During very cold weather, we will hold orders and send bulbs as soon as weather conditions are safe against severe frost.

No substitutes or changes will be made unless desired. As stock of some varieties is very limited, we suggest early orders.

GUARANTEE — I guarantee satisfaction. Every bulb is guaranteed true to name, and if it is not, you will confer a favor on me by telling me. It is a lot easier to do business with friends, and so I am trying to do my best to make you a friend.

Dozen rates are ten times the price of one bulb. All stock offered and orders accepted, subject to prior sale — in which case, money will be refunded.

The Gladiolus and Its Culture

In addition to their great beauty, the Gladioli are becoming more popular on account of their ease of culture. The Gladiolus will thrive in almost any good garden soil, but seems at its best in soils that are more or less sandy.

Well-rotted cow or sheep manure are the best fertilizers to use on average soils; fresh manure should not be used unless it has been worked into the soil the fall before planting time. Well balanced fertilizers may be used to an advantage, if used as a top dressing and worked into the ground at planting time. Generally speaking, handle your soil for planting exactly the same as for vegetable growing.

Plant the bulbs about 4 inches deep, and about 6 inches apart in the row; the rows should be at least 18 inches apart, so as to make it convenient for cultivating. Give them plenty of cultivation, which will repay one well in the finer flowers secured through thorough cultivation.

The first planting may be made in the spring as soon as the ground is warm, and in good, workable condition. If a succession of blooms are desired throughout the summer, new plantings should be made about 10 days after the foliage of the previous planting shows through the ground, and additional plantings continued until the last week in June, which is about as late as it is safe to make the last planting in order to secure flowers before frost.

Contrary to the common belief, the flowers of the Gladiolus do not mix colors when different varieties are planted side by side.

If the flowers are intended for indoor use, the spike should be cut as soon as the first bud opens, the balance of the buds will open when placed in water almost to the tip of the stalk; a small part of the bottom of the stalk should be cut off each day and fresh water used; they will last a week or ten days when treated this way.

Care must be used when cutting the spike so as to leave as much foliage as possible on the plant. This is necessary if the bulb is intended to be saved, and planted another season. Most so-called “worn-out” bulbs are from plants from which too much foliage has been removed.

The bulbs may be lifted as soon as they show signs of turning brown, or have been hit by heavy frost. The tops may be removed at digging time, and the bulbs should be allowed to dry before storing away for the winter. Any cool, dry place that is suitable for keeping potatoes, will do well for bulbs.
